Review of International American Studies (RIAS), is the electronic journal of the International American Studies Association, the only worldwide, independent, non-governmental association of American Studies. RIAS serves as agora for the global network of international scholars, teachers, and students of America as hemispheric and global phenomenon. RIAS is published three times a year: in the Fall, Winter and Spring by IASA with the institutional support of the University of Silesia in Katowice lending server space to some of IASA websites and the electronic support of the Soft For Humans CMS Designers. Subscription rates or RIAS are included along with the Association's annual dues as specified in the "Membership" section of the Association's website (www.iasaweb.org).

All topical manuscripts should be directed to the Editor via online submission forms available at RIAS website (www.iasa-rias.org). General correspondence and matters concerning the functioning of RIAS should be addressed to RIAS Editor-in-Chief:

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Laura Doyle teaches at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. She is the author of Bordering on the Body: The Racial Matrix of Modern Fiction and Culture (Oxford 1994, recipient of the Narrative Society's Perkins Prize), Freedom's Empire: Race and the Rise of the Novel in Atlantic Modernity, 1640-1940 (Duke, 2008), and co-editor of Geomodernisms: Race, Modernism, Modernity (Indiana UP, 2005).

Margaret Mills Harper is Professor of English and Women's Studies at Georgia State University. She is the author of The Aristocracy of Art (1990), an examination of the mixed rhetoric of class and aesthetics in the autobiographical fictions of James Joyce and Thomas Wolfe, Wisdom of Two (2006), the first study of the occult collaboration between W. B. Yeats and his wife George Hyde Lees, and numerous articles. She has co-edited two volumes in the four-volume series Yeats's "Vision" Papers and Yeats's A Vision (1925); an edition of A Vision (1937) is in preparation.

Tace Hedrick is Associate Professor of English and Women's Studies at the University of Florida. She is the author of Mestizo Modernisms: Race, Nation, and Identity in Latin American Culture, 1900-1940 (Rutgers Press, 2003), which examines the discourses of mestizaje, modernity, and nationalism in the work of several early 20th century Latin American modernist artists. Dr. Hedrick's next book, tentatively entitled Queering the Cosmic Race: Spirituality, Race, and Sexuality in US Latina(o) Artists and Writers, 1970-2000, studies four US Latina(o) artists and writers within a transnational intellectual and artistic history of people of color of the Americas who have, from the early 20th century, investigated alternatives to Western as a way of reformulating existing social ideas about race, gender, and sexuality. She has published numerous articles in journals such as Aztlán: A Journal of Chicano Studies, The Translator, Latin American Literary Review, and The Luso-Brazilian Review.

Cyraina Johnson-Roullier is Associate Professor of English at the University of Notre Dame, where she teaches modern literature and literature of the Americas. She is the author of Reading on the Edge: Exiles, Modernities and Cultural Transformation in Proust, Joyce and Baldwin (SUNY, 2000), a work that rewrites the boundaries of modern discourse through a reading of modernist intertextuality in Proust, Joyce and Baldwin. She is currently working on her second book, tentatively entitled Invisible Women: Gender, Modernity and the Representation of Race, a study exploring race, gender and modernity in American and black diasporic literature from the late 19th to the mid-20th century. She has published essays on modernism, literary and feminist theory and hemispheric studies.

Giorgio Mariani teaches American Literature at the 'Sapeinza' University of Rome and is Vice-President of the International American Studies Association. He co-edited the volume Emerson at 200 (Rome 2004) and is currently completing a book on representations of peace and war in American literature.

Jeremy Paden is currently working on a book manuscript, Divine Politics: A Poetics of Power in 17th Century New Spain, in which he examines the intersection of poetry and politics in 17th century Novohispanic religious occasional verse. His essay, 'The Iguana and the Barrel of Mud: Memory, Natural History, and Hermeneutics in Oviedo's Sumario de la natural historia de las Indias' appeared in Colonial Latin American Review and another, 'Hunger's Brides: Obra, vida e imagen de sor Juana' appeared in cuadernos de música, artes visuales, y artes escénicas.

Sonita Sarker is Professor of English and Women's, Gender and Sexuality Studies at Macalester College has published on modernist figures such as Virginia Woolf, Rokeya Sakhawat Hossain, Cornelia Sorabji, and Walter Benjamin. She is currently writing a transnational comparative study of modernist women intellectuals from India, Italy, England, Argentina, and the United States, and preparing a reprint edition of Cornelia Sorabji's India Recalled (1936).

Kirsten Strom is Associate Professor of Art History at Grand Valley State University in Michigan. Her research interests include Surrealism, postmodern theory, 'Dance Anthropology,' and other topics blurring the boundaries between academic disciplines. She has published in several journals including The Journal of Aesthetics and Art Criticism, Design Issues, and Papers of Surrealism.

Steven G. Yao is Associate Professor of English at Hamilton College. He is the author of Translation and the Languages of Modernism: Gender, Politics, Language (Palgrave 2002). He is completing a book-length study of Chinese American poetry entitled, Foreign Accents: Chinese American Verse and the Counter-Poetics of Difference in the US, 1910-Present, and is the co-editor (with Eric Hayot and Haun Saussy) of Sinographies: Writing China (Minnesota 2008), which seeks to offer a new critical model for understanding China and the role it plays in Western literary and political life.
